Vision Shared Announces New President

CHARLESTON, W.Va. – The Board of Directors of Vision Shared Inc. is pleased to announce that Rebecca McPhail Randolph will lead the organization as President and CEO beginning June 1, 2011.

“The Vision Shared Board is excited to bring Rebecca on board as our new President and CEO,” said Becky Ceperley, chairman of the Vision Shared Board of Directors. “We are supremely confident in her abilities and welcome her with open arms.”

Randolph is currently employed as the Assistant Vice President for Development at Marshall University, located in Huntington, W.Va. Prior to working for Marshall, Ms. Randolph was Director of Development at the University of Charleston in Charleston, W.Va.

Randolph Before returning to West Virginia in 2003, she served as Grant Development and Research Manager and Interim Director of Development for the YMCA of Greater Cleveland in Cleveland, Ohio. She has also worked for non-profit health care organizations in both West Virginia and Ohio and as a development consultant in northeast Ohio.

Randolph earned her bachelor’s degree from the West Virginia Institute of Technology. She and her family reside in Huntington.

Randolph replaces Ms. Juliet A. Terry as President and CEO of Vision Shared. Ms. Terry has served for over three years in that position and has led the organization through the transition from a public/private partnership to a dynamic stand-alone non-profit.

“On behalf of the Board of Directors I would like to thank Julie for her leadership and dedication to Vision Shared,” Ceperley said. “We wish her well in her new position as Manger of Government Relations for the North American Coal Division of Cliffs Natural Resources.”
